2) Do you specialize?

3) Describe your overall style to me (for newborn photography)

4) Do you do sibling and family shots? How about pets?

5) How will I get to view my final images?

6) Do you back up my images, or will you be able to give me digital negatives so that I can back them up?

7) What is the average investment for families that you work with, and do you have packages? What forms of payment do you take?

8) Can you come to me, or do you have a studio location?

9) When should I book my session and why?

10) Have you taken any training courses for posing newborn babies?

11) Are you insured? (Note: Don't be afraid to ask for proof, it is not rude, and if they are insured, then they are most likely licensed as well)

12) Are you vaccinated for whooping cough (year round) and flu (seasonal)?

13) Can I see a full recent session to get an idea of your style and the final images I will receive?

a) look for consistency

b) ask about safety for precarious looking poses

c) assess basic camera experience (lighting, focus, etc.)

d) decide if the babies look comfortable and natural whether asleep or awake in all or nearly all of the poses—look out for poses and positions that look forced.
